HOW MINING STIMULATES BUSINESS

WHENEVER a new mine becomes a profitable producer, it is of immediate and direct benefit to the district in which it is located, besides influencing the prosperity of remoter regions, says the Denver Mining Record. What the west owes to mining is aptly illustrated in any of the big mining camps on pay day, when the miners receive their monthly paychecks and the mining companies settle outstanding bills for mine supplies bought of local dealers. It is a busy time. Many thousands of dollars are paid into the tills of establishments in all lines of trade to cancel credit obligation; and a tidy sum finds its way into the savings departments of the banks. The money thus put into circulation travels through the ordinary channels of traffic to a multitude of commercial centers, where it acts as a constructive factor.

A fair example of what the mining industry means to a community may be noted at Tonopah, Nevada, one of the large producing silver camps of the west. Advances received from there show that during a recent pay day fully $400,000 was paid by the miners and mining companies to Tonopah business houses, while a substantial increase was observed in bank deposits. This big amount was merely the distribution on the 10th of the month. There always is a heavy disbursement on the first, since many mining enterprises prefer this date as more desirable for wage and business settlements.

Such statistics clearly prove that the mines are influential prosperity makers, not only for the neighborhood where they operate, but for the whole world, which is reaching forth with eager hands for the newly created wealth dug from the depths of the earth.

It is easy to understand, therefore, what a number of successful mining camps means to the west. Their activities result in the payment of millions of dollars in dividends, besides being a healthful stimulus to trade and insuring a large employment of labor. Right at this time there is a decided revival of interest in mining, as is shown by news from all of the mineral belts. Old mines that have long lain idle are being worked again, with the certainty that modern low cost methods of treatment will assure the profitable operation of low grade properties that in former times could not be made to pay. Many new properties, as well, are conducting exploration work and numerous important strikes are being reported from time to time. Considering the situation impartially, and taking into account the immense earning power and money distributing features of mining, it now looks as if the entire west is destined to experience a year of redundant prosperity.

SOUNDS KEYNOTE OF NEW POLICY

THE freedom and straightforwardness with which Branch H. Smith, superintendent of the Monarch-Pittsburg mine, which now is a center of interest by reason of its adding 1200 feet to the known ore zone, gives out information regarding the property, is pleasing to the stockholders and the general public. Such a policy does much to inspire confidence. Mining is not more a mystery than farming and there is no reason why there should be concealment of developments in a property in which the public are interested, by reason of all who hold shares being copartners. The mine managers of Tonopah are less prone to hold news in abeyance than those of other districts, and this is one reason why there is greater confidence in the Tonopah securities than in those of certain other districts. Mr. Smith's frankness, the Bonanza believes, sounds the keynote of a new policy, which should be adopted by every mine manager in the state, although, to reiterate, this criticism can be less justly made of the Tonopah managers than those elsewhere.

AUTHOR OF NOTE DESERVES SEVERE PUNISHMENT

NO matter whether it was a veritable black hand warning or a "practical joke," the author of the note pinned to the door of a residence in Tonopah several days ago should be punished by a long term in prison and he may yet be apprehended. "Practical jokes" of this type are neither humorous nor witty, but are criminally cruel, causing the victims to suffer tense apprehension of an unseen danger that may strike them at any time. Mere thoughtlessness and the spirit of prank playing could not excuse the writer of the note, nor palliate his offense. But if, on the other hand, the demand for money was made with intent to punish its refusal, the person writing the note should be run to earth and given no trial in the courts. His type is growing in numbers in the United States and they are one of its most serious menaces.

ENGROSSING AND PROFITABLE

THE eagerness for the vegetable seeds distributed by the Bonanza for the government evidences that the residents of Tonopah and environs will cultivate gardens extensively this season. There is no reason why the people of this city should be so dependent upon the market gardeners of California. There are the three necessities here, soil, moisture and climate. All that is necessary is causing them to work together. Many table delicacies could be grown in the dooryards that are now barren, even of grass. Gardening on an extensive scale would hardly be profitable where water must be purchased on the present meter basis, but small plots of vegetables, intensively cultivated, would be pleasant pastime during the idle hours and afford choice dainties for the table.

NEUTRALITY CARRIED TO EXTREMES

ONE saying circumstance in the grave crisis which is believed to confront the United States is that its neutrality is severely questioned by both parties to the war, thus evidencing that Uncle Sam must be pursuing a medial course and endeavoring to affront neither of the combatants. Public sentiment in this country is far from being a unit as to the merits of the case abroad and it would be difficult to foment a feeling that would be unanimous either way. The population of this republic is so cosmopolitan that hostility toward either of the groups of powers would not be countenanced, unless it was warranted by some specific act that could not pass unresented and unpunished.

There is no immediate, perhaps not even ultimate, danger of the United States entering the war, but there is ample reason why, in view of the many acts performed by either side, reflecting upon our national honor and fearlessness, they should neither pass unnoticed or simply call forth the interchange of meaningless diplomacies. Although strictly neutral, this government should not be absolutely passive and receptive of both insult and injury.

And now Representative Gilbert has intruded himself in the mineral land commissioner affair. Keep out, Mr. Gilbert. The attorney general is already overpaid by the salary he receives for that office, without getting both hands into the public treasury. By the way, what is a mineral land commissioner good for, anyway, and how many hours a day does he put in at the job?

From the way the Russian soldiers are falling back in Bukovina it would appear that another little drink of vodka wouldn't do them any harm.
